About 1:30 p. m., Monday the Orland Park Fire Department was called out to Palos Park where a serious fire threatened the palatial 25 room home of George Stebbins, wealthy Chicago hardware dealer.

The fire had started in a combination barn and garage adjoining the house. In connection with the barn was a Dutch type windmill and a 35 foot tower surmounted with a 6x6 foot water tank. The barn and garage were doomed. A truck and one automobile were run out of the garage, but a third car fell prey to the flames.

Seeing other buildings were beyond saving, the firemen turned attention toward saving the dwelling. The heat was so intense that the tar composition roof melted and the hot tar ran in the gutters like water. After a hard fight the dwelling was saved. The loss is estimated at about $7,000 covered by insurance.

Seminary Professor, Pastor Without a Pulpit, Creates Unique "Church of the Air"

ST. LOUIS—(Special)—A remarkable enterprise in the field of modern evangelism has been established by the noted Lutheran theologian, Walter A. Maier, Ph. D., member of the faculty of Concordia Seminary here, who preaches the Gospel as a Sunday afternoon sideline.

Speaking each Sunday over the coast-to-coast Lutheran Hour network, Dr. Maier receives letters from his listeners in a volume that famous stars of the entertainment world might envy—as many as 7,000 in a single week, a half million since the broadcasts began.

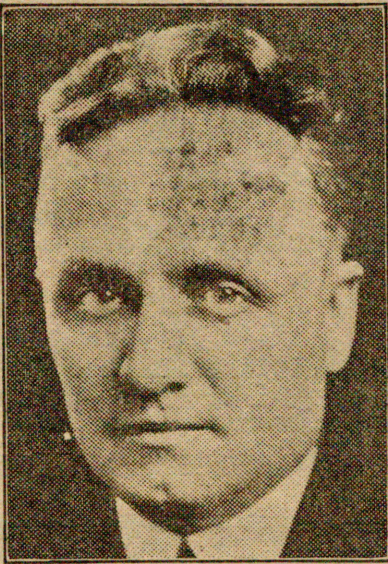

All the modern languages and even classic Latin are represented in this mail and the establishment of a Braille script department is contemplated for handling the correspondence with the blind. Foreign language newspapers frequently request material, while Dr. Maier's lectures are now being translated into Arabic for distribution in Palestine, Transjordan and among Arabic traders in Africa.

Many Denominations Approve
Advocating the complete acceptance of Christ and the Scriptures, Dr. Maier is the recipient of many letters from members of the clergy and laity of other denominations, both Protestant and Catholic, warmly praising his views. Pastors of many denominations have set a precedent, according to Dr. Maier, by urging their own parishioners to listen to the Lutheran Hour.

More than once, listeners have written to thank Dr. Maier for dissuading them from suicide; others for changing their determination to seek divorce. A Missouri "lifer" writes regularly of his renewed faith, while the Governor of a state paid tribute and an industrialist with a "front-page" name visited Dr. Maier to obtain advice on a personal problem.

"Problem" Letters
The most interesting of all, according to Dr. Maier, are his so-called "problem letters," received in response to his offer of spiritual advice to any listener who has no church affiliation. Men and women who have suffered sorrows and reverses; hospital "shut-ins," many of them incurably ill; parents concerned with the social problems of their children, prison inmates and persons in isolated places not convenient to churches, reveal their desire for spiritual renewal in letters which Dr. Maier, aided by a large volunteer staff, answers personally.

Graduate of Harvard and Concordia Seminary, Dr. Maier is a full-time member of the faculty of the seminary, as professor of Old Testament interpretation. His activities on the Lutheran Hour, for which he refuses all compensation, are carried on between classes and afterward, and still Dr. Maier finds time somehow for prolific writing on religious and religious-social topics, his books being widely read and commented upon.

Heard Throughout America
Five years ago the voice of this modern missionary was heard over but two stations. Today 61 stations of a national network carry his messages to the far corners of the continent, and several other stations voluntarily pick up the programs and rebroadcast them for the benefit of their own audiences. A substantial portion of the expenses of the broadcasts, all of which are paid for at regular rates, is voluntarily contributed by the listening audience.

The Lutheran Hour is sponsored by the Lutheran Laymen's League, with the cooperation of the International Waltham League, young people's organization with a national membership of 85,000. These lay organizations have the cooperation of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states, composed of several thousand Lutheran churches.

Just See What's Doing In Mokena

It was an exceptionally beautiful day in this vicinity Thursday morning, 100 in the shade, but were we surprised when by evening, we had to dig ourselves out of ten foot snow drifts. But such is life and today is another wonderful day.

It is good to take a review of our town's progress and in the past few years Mokena surely has taken steps forward, some of which are: the fine addition Geo. Wannemacher has built to his store, and he is now doing a land office business selling horse shoes, spark plugs and lemonade.

The Mitchel Brewery is doing real well manufacturing ice cream and axel grease.

Wm. Helenhouse reports shoeing one of the race horses which will run in the Churchill Downs race this year and he is also having much success in raising cauliflowers. And is Al. Braun busy! He is thinking of building an addition to his black smith shop as he is now manufacturing marbles for all the little and big boys. He has been asked to make jumping ropes, which he thinks he will do.

Richard Hensel, our genial druggist, after his pleasant experience, recently, has hung out a sign, "Come in, Help Yourself, All Is Free", because he has built a swimming pool and business was so rushing yesterday that he had to employ the help of our Fire Chief, Herman Schweser to hand out the beauty contest tickets, the winner for yesterday, being none other than Mr. Elmer Cooper, who is somewhat overcome by this success and who is already giving lessons in swimming, (no charge whatsoever). And his partner, Barney Hostert and he are forgetting about car repairs and Ford V8s, and are experimenting with the manufacturing of swimming suits and doing well. But one order, that of Gus Braun, stumped them, when he ordered his suit made in ten different colors and the style of 1840. They expect to fill the order.

Elmer Sippel has built such a tall sky scraper that he is rushed with business, taking people to the top in a hot carrier for 13c and a photo of the customer. The later he is using in his art gallery in connection with his fine new zoo. These warm days have brought out the citizenry and Bob Bechstein, after the experience at the winter circus, Chicago, offered his services as guide and is having a fine time showing the high spots of Mokena and the zoo to the 500 people who ended this week.

And are the Cappel Brothers happy, for since they are manufacturing jewelry, their success is outstanding. They solicit your old gold and the beautiful lorgnette which they made for our postmistress, Miss Margaret Maue has commanded much attention. By the way, Miss Maue writes from Washington D. C. that she is enjoying her new work as chief inspector for James Farley fine.

John Nielsen and Whitney Carter have been so busy since the new four-story Rock Island depot has been built in Mokena and since the Rocket makes daily stops here for the commuters who ply their way to New York, that they have closed the depot several days for a rest.

Among those commuting to New York are: Herbert Bruns, who is doing fine selling gold fish on the eastern markets; Leon Tonn who conducts a Chorus Girls' Employment Agency; Willard Martie who sells hot air furnaces etc.

Wm. Semmler is getting a little rest these days by conducting a Prof. Quiz show in small towns and in idle moments instructing in auto driving. Photos of his students he sends to the Sippel art gallery. And is Earl Donaldson, Clifford Mahoney and Geo. Stermer having a time publishing the Mokena Daily, only they can't agree on which will be society editor and which the printer's devil. But Geo. Knudson has settled it, by saying he will be boss so all is peaceful on the news front.

FRANKFORT MAN WINS LAW SUIT AFTER 6 YEARS

The past week Attorney A. H. Krusemark scored a victory in a law suit extending over six years.

In January 1932 Wm. L. Knippel of Frankfort held an auction sale. John Carroll of the Hyde Park Farm in Palos Park bought a team of horses at this sale for which he gave a note. When the note came due it was not paid, and then Mr. Knippel issued a writ of replevin and replevined the horses.

Mr. Carroll then brought suit in the sum of $3000 for damages, expenses and attorney's fees against Mr. Knippel and John Kline of Blue Island, the latter having signed the replevin bond with Mr. Knippel.

The case came up before Judge Cavalry who ruled in favor of Mr. Carroll and ordered the horses returned to him, but Mr. Knippel refused to do this.

The past week the case came up again in Chicago in the court of Judge Walter LeBoy who ruled in favor of Mr. Knippel and dismissed the case.

The latter was represented by A. H. Krusemark while Mr. Carroll had for his counsel Cullum, Dean & Mead of Chicago.

A Seamless Knit on Round Needle

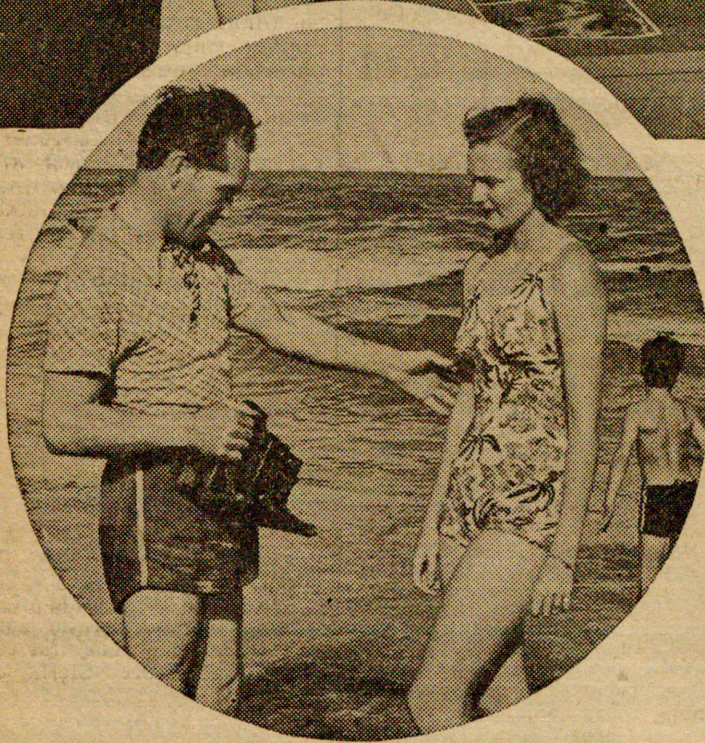

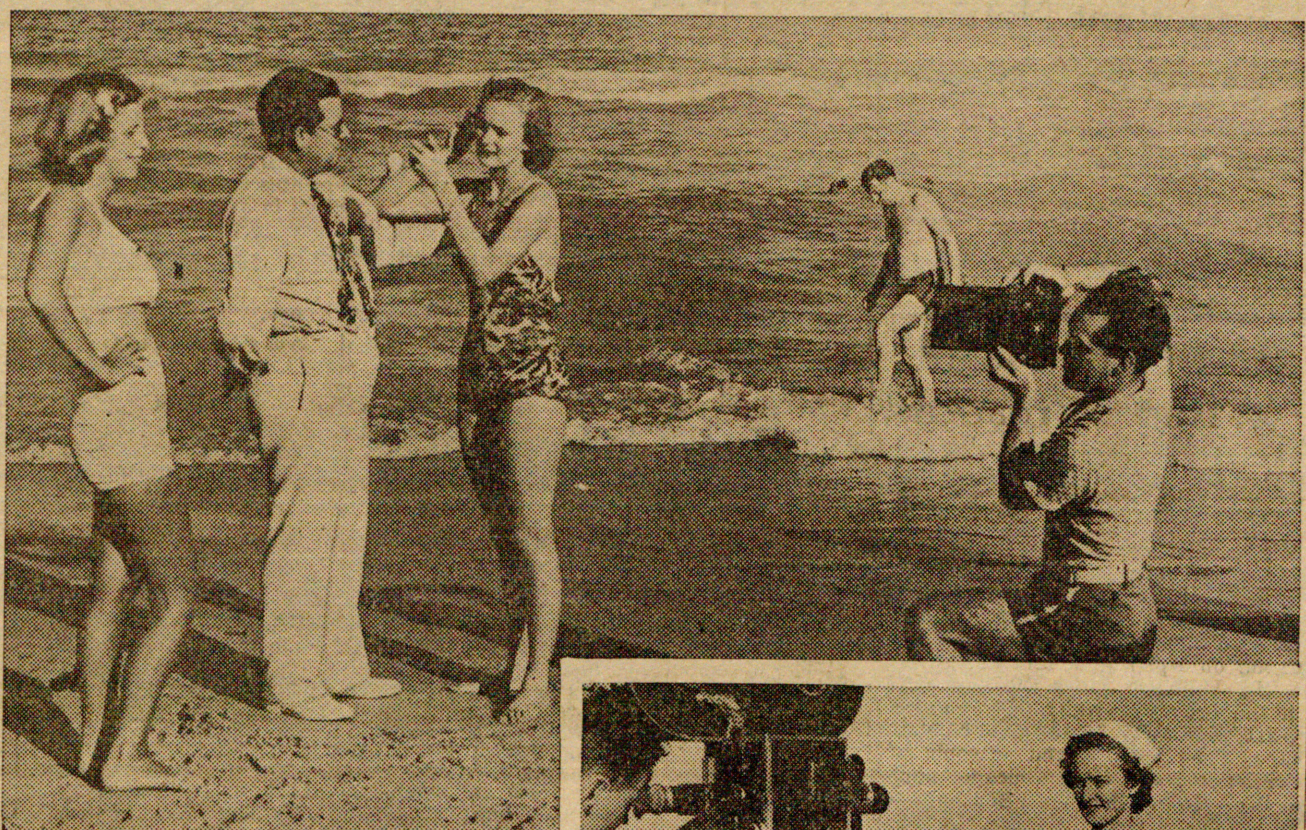

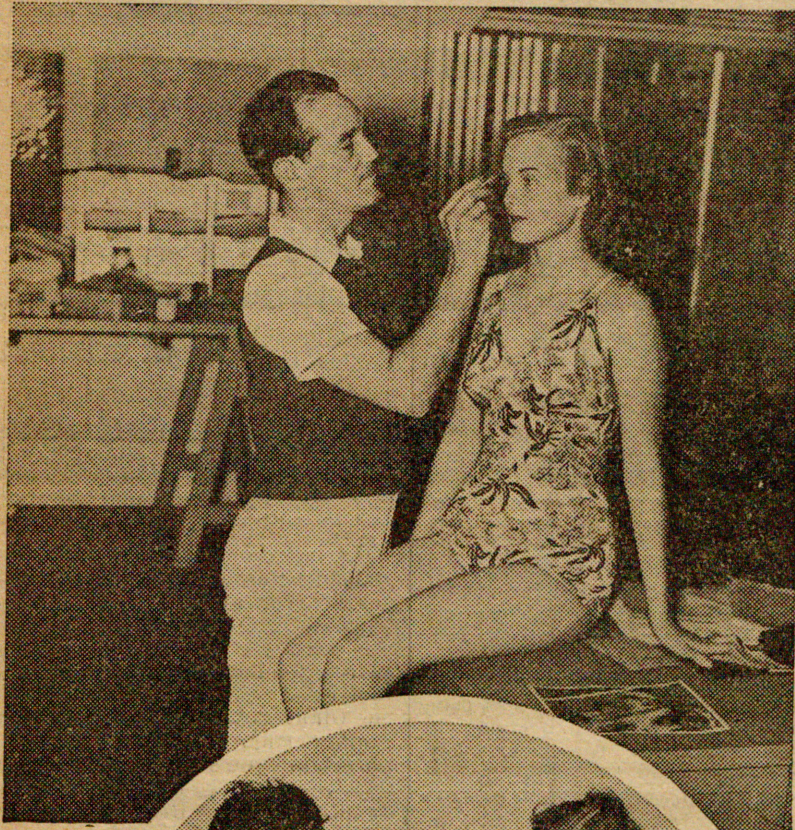

All eyes on this knitted two-piecer! So summery, in white or pastels, it's done mainly in stockinette stitch, with a lace stitch defining its "sunburst" yoke. Use a round needle and there'll be nary a seam to sew or show. You'll love it in either nubby cotton yarn, a combination of wool and rayon, or in Shetland floss.

In pattern 5601 you will find instructions for making the blouse and skirt in sizes 16-18 and 38-40; an illustration of the blouse and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York.

Laura is "made up" for the camera and taken to the famed sea shore at Miami Beach. Like a movie star, she has a "stand-in" (above) while primping for the photographer. Both "stills" and moving pictures are employed to bring the nation's attention to this shapely young lady and the resort city she advertises. Straight poses and stunt pictures like the water bicycle (lower left) are prepared by the ingenious press agents. A few weeks later Laura sees her picture as it appeared in papers throughout the nation.

The Curse of Progress

An Invaluable Aid To the Housewife

IN THIS issue you will find the fourth of the series of articles written by C. Houston Goudiss, famous food expert whose books, radio talks and lectures have made him known all over the country.

In this article Mr. Goudiss discusses the vitally important subject, "Mineral Salts." He shows the necessity of these materials in the diet, and their relation to the building of a strong heart, healthy nerves, rich red blood, strong bones and sound teeth. He also gives the food sources of these salts.

Read each one of these articles as they appear weekly in this newspaper. They will prove invaluable to the housewife in assisting her to keep the entire family mentally and physically fit.

water. And the use of iodized salt is also recommended. By these simple measures, thousands of growing children can be saved from the disastrous results of iodine deficiency.

In general, it can be said that if the minerals calcium, phosphorus, iron and iodine are supplied in adequate amounts, the other minerals will be automatically furnished.

But every homemaker should make it her solemn responsibility to provide these four in abundance. For only in that way can you insure optimal growth in children, develop vigorous health in adults, and maintain the highest possible tone of every organ in the body.

A Splendid "Service" for Floors

Floors receive rougher treatment than any other part of the home—and it is floors that show up to poorest advantage when neglected—best advantage, when properly cared for! Up to now, attractive floors have required some little time and attention, but this is no longer necessary. For into the field of domestic preparations has come "self-polishing wax"—liquid-smooth, simple to apply, lovely to see. This remarkable preparation goes on easily, quickly, and dries in 20 minutes! Its results are 4-fold: The floors are protected—they are preserved—they stay freshly-clean longer—and they are beautified! A quality self-polishing wax protects and preserves, by forming a film over the surface—hard enough to withstand friction and grinding wear-and-tear. It induces floors to stay clean longer, because dirt and grease cannot become imbedded in the wood. It beautifies, because it is shimmering, transparent, and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. And what more could the home-maker ask for? There are, however, various qualities of self-polishing wax available. Only the best should be used, for both the appearance and condition of the floors. But the finest self-polishing wax is a joy to use—its lasting results a joy to see!

FLOORS POLISH THEMSELVES

...with O-Cedar Self-Polishing Wax. No rubbing—simply spread it on and let it dry—then watch your floors sparkle! Non-slippery, long-wearing—eliminates scrubbing—dusting alone keeps floors clean.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Reality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 27.

The Golden Text was, "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever" (Psalms 125:1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life. Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil" (Proverbs 4:23, 26, 27).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Erroneous belief is destroyed by truth. Change the evidence and that disappears which before seemed real to this false belief and the human consciousness rises higher. Thus the reality of being is attained and man found to be immortal" (p. 297).

J. Hinton Massey Rep. Candidate For Probate Judge

J. Hinton Massey

J. Hinton Massey, as a candidate for the important office of Probate Judge of Will County, embodies the essential qualifications that the voter in general and Republican leaders in particular have been holding up as imperative to the success of good government and particularly the success of the Republican party. He is in the vigor of young manhood, being 37 years of age, recently built a new home in Plainfield and was married in 1935. He is active in civic and religious affairs, being a member of the Methodist Church and also participating in the activities of several religious organizations in this and surrounding counties.

In the practice of law Mr. Massey has had 8 1/2 years' experience, graduating from Northwestern University in 1925 and from Chicago Kent College of Law in 1929, and for the past 8 1/2 years he has been in active practice in the courts of Will and adjoining counties, very largely in matters of probate, in which he has specialized. He is now the acting village attorney of Plainfield and is connected with the law office of Irving Shuts in Joliet, out of which he has practiced law for 8 1/2 years.

Mr. Massey holds well defined and carefully thought out opinions regarding the duties of a probate judge and the obligations of the probate court to the public, and is well equipped by reason of these definite opinions to give the patrons of that important branch of legal service the very best and most practical and careful legal and technical advice and care to make probate matters simple and accurate to those who have business with the probate court.

Mr. Massey has no political entanglements, having never been a candidate for public office before and will, if elected, be in a position to administer the affairs of the probate judge's office without dictation from any source and in the interest of all the people. It is well known that political entanglements render a public office difficult to administer and sometimes expensive to the tax payer and dangerous to the well being of the incumbent, so in the interest of efficiency and economy it is well for one to go into office with no strings attached to him. Mr. Massey has all his life been an ardent Republican, in prosperity and adversity, because he believes the Republican party best fitted by policy and character to administer a true democracy in a modern republic. The country needs to get back to sane and simple governmental fundamentals as speedily as possible and now is the time to start and start vigorously and earnestly.

The Republican Voters will have an opportunity on April 12 to select candidates for the November election and the desire so often expressed for new faces in public service will be well subserved by remembering Mr. Massey's candidacy at this very important primary election.

Deputy Treasurer Albert E. Kinson CANDIDATE FOR DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Experience is what counts in public life today, we think, not only to the individual himself, but, as well to the people he serves. In fact experience is necessary to make a success of any vocation and that is particularly true in any public office.

Albert E. Kinson has with nine years of service in the County Treasurer's office as a deputy, proven his qualifications for this office and submits his practical experience in the office, coupled with a deep-seated desire to satisfactorily discharge his duties to the people, as an indication of his qualifications to faithfully perform this service.

Deputy Kinson is familiar with every problem confronting the County Treasurer due to his long association with the office.

Emmett McGuire

CANDIDATE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR SHERIFF

A name well identified in the public and political life of Will County, is that of Emmett McGuire, Joliet Township Highway Commissioner at Joliet who is conducting a real campaign for the Democratic nomination townfolks of the county.

His campaign is being well received by both the farmers and He is a well known man of Joliet, who enjoys an excellent standing as a citizen and due to his understanding of official problems, he is most able and qualified to satisfactorily fill the office of Sheriff.

In compiling this political feature review, presenting candidates who have announced their candidacy for public office, we find no candidate who enjoys a higher reputation or standing, and this fact should be kept in mind by the reader when entering the booth on the coming primary day.

Walter Grant Smith

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

In our opinion, no political review of Will County would be complete unless comments were included upon Walter Grant Smith, Superintendent of Monee Elementary and High Schools. Mr. Smith has 28 years of experience in rural elementary and high schools, 17 years of this experience spent in Will County. When he was placed in his work at Monee, one of the responsible assignments in the County, is reflected in a large measure, the high regard and high esteem in which he is held by those who seek the ablest man in his profession.

Diversified training and lengthy experience in school administration and supervision, make Walter Grant Smith the most favorable candidate for the Republican nomination for Will County Superintendent of Schools.

Joseph J. Loeffler

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR SHERIFF

This year the people, in our opinion, are going to scan the record of the man who aspires to the office of sheriff carefully.

Joseph J. Loeffler of Joliet, a well known sports lover and citizen seeks, in his first venture into political life, the Republican nomination for Sheriff. His past record as a citizen invites the stamp of approval.

He is fifty-two years of age, a man of matured judgement. He has been an employee of the U. S. Steel Company for the past 35 years.

He is a man with the physical stamina the sheriff's job calls for and with his physical fitness goes the mental courage and the honest view point necessary to the office.

His friends think that he has a splendid chance of capturing this coveted nomination and if he does, he will be an asset to the Republican ticket this fall.

J. Arthur Baskerville

CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR COUNTY TREASURER

J. Arthur Baskerville, a well known citizen of Joliet, engaged in the livestock business, is making a strong appeal for the Republican nomination in the coming primaries for County Treasurer and needless to say his candidacy is meeting favorable comment throughout the entire county.

Mr. Baskerville is backed with excellent training and would be able to fill this office to the full satisfaction of the people. He is the possessor of an excellent reputation and counts his friends and boosters by the thousands carrying the endorsement of many prominent citizens.

In making this review at this time we gladly call the attention of the reader to this candidacy and suggest that the selection of the Republican nominee for County Treasurer be given careful thought on primary day.

Gordon S. Breen

CANDIDATE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR SHERIFF

When you vote for a man for sheriff in the coming primaries, you want to be sure that your choice will enforce the laws of your county, state and nation, irrespective of sympathy and threats. The sheriff of any county is its strong arm of the law, and therefore the office requires a man who is fearless and competent. This political review would not be complete without mention made of Gordon S. Breen of Joliet, and his candidacy for the Democratic Nomination for Sheriff. He will, if he is nominated and elected, handle this office efficiently and always watchful of the interests of all the people. He will always be found intent on serving the people to the best of his ability. Gordon S. Breen asks your support toward his nomination for Sheriff and will certainly appreciate any effort you make toward his success and the good words you may say in his behalf.

Abe Frank

CANDIDATE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Abe Frank of Joliet is making a strong appeal for the Democratic nomination for the County Treasurer and it is said his candidacy is meeting with favorable comment throughout the entire Will County area.

Mr. Frank is backed with much business experience and training and would be able to fill this office to the full satisfaction of the people.

He possesses an excellent reputation and counts his friends by the thousands. He carries the endorsement of many prominent citizens.

Scott W. Lucas

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR

U. S. SENATOR

Scott W. Lucas has a record of service to the people of Illinois that has won for him the deserved confidence of citizens in all walks of life.

After service in the U. S. Army during the World War he served vigorously, capably and fearlessly as State's Attorney of Mason County.

As chairman of the Illinois Tax Commission he demonstrated unswerving devotion to the best interests of the taxpayers of Illinois. He was a staunch supporter of Governor Henry Horner in the battle for fair and just taxes and for elimination of the State property tax, which has saved the owners of farms and other property $35,000,000 annually during the last six years.

As a member of Congress from the Twentieth Illinois district during the past four years, he has given patriotic and loyal service to not only his district, but the whole State as well.

As a U. S. Senator, he will do credit to the State of Illinois.

In SCOTT W. LUCAS the farmers of Illinois have a leader and a champion. Born on a farm of stock going back four generations in Illinois to his great-grandfather, who was one of the first white settlers of Cass County, it is no wonder that Scott W. Lucas, when he became a member of Congress in 1934, was given the unusual recognition of being appointed a member of the important House Agricultural Committee during his first term.

As a member of that Committee, he has interested himself in all farm legislation advocated by organized agriculture. He has been closely associated with the leaders of the American Farm Bureau Federation and Illinois Agricultural Association in framing, sponsoring and supporting measures in which those groups were interested.

He was an outstanding member of Congress in the fight for adoption of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. As a member of the subcommittee on corn legislation, he labored day and night for the principles advocated by the A. F. B. F. He acted as chairman of a bloc of 50 members of Congress representing corn growing States, whose work resulted in adoption of these principles, including mandatory loans on corn. He worked and labored for the Farm Tenancy Bill.

Last year he sponsored an amendment to the Sugar Bill which would place a tax on black-strap molasses, thereby eliminating it as a competitor of corn in the distillery market. He was successful in getting the amendment out of Committee and adopted by the House. It was lost, however, in the Senate. In the fight for that amendment, he brought to the attention of Congress for the first time that the use of black-strap molasses is eliminating from the market corn which would require one and one half million acres for growing. He will continue the fight for an importers' and manufacturers' tax upon black-strap molasses.

Problems In Education

By BERNICE VAN der VRIES
Member of the Education Committee,
House of Representatives,
General Assembly of Illinois

Having discussed in my two previous articles the difficulties in the way of education, first in the United States and then more specifically in the State of Illinois, let us see what the General Assembly, which is charged by the Constitution with the duty of providing "a thorough and efficient system of free schools whereby all the children may receive a good common school education", has done to correct the "glaring inequalities" of educational opportunity in Illinois.

Through the years, since 1907, five school commissions authorized by the General Assembly and appointed by Governors Deneen, Small, Emerson and Horner have worked on the problem.

Every commission has recognized the need for action in the State and every commission has recommended a State Board of Education as the agency best fitted to bring about a modernization of our entire school system, and a coordination of our educational activities from the primary grades through the University and the Normal school. But instead of working upon this recommendation, the Legislature under pressure from local officials, teachers and parents, has concentrated its efforts on the passage of laws to make more local tax monies available to the schools and in efforts to increase the amount of state aid.

In his message to the General Assembly when it convened on January 6, 1937 for the 60th Session, Governor Horner made it very plain that he would not favor any increased State aid until a State Board of Education authorized by the Legislature gave attention to the school problems of the State.

Accordingly Senator Stuttle introduced a State Board Bill as the first bill in the Senate and it thereby became known as Senate Bill 1. Unfortunately, the bill gave the State Board so much power that school authorities all over the State became frightened and frantically wired their Senators and Representatives to kill the Bill and killed it was in the House.

Opposition came too from agricultural districts which feared consolidation. In fact, school districts having several hundred pupils in a school were misled into believing that they too would have to consolidate. So great was the opposition that in some quarters it assumed hysterical proportions.

It is not difficult to understand that with the attacks made on the State Board Bill, the General Assembly became thoroughly confused and its members held many different views on the proposition. In the meantime, the Governor remained firm in his contention that State financial aid should not be increased and the Legislature adjourned on June 1st without having passed either a State School Board Bill or having increased badly needed State Aid.

When it was realized that the lack of an agreed program on the part of the educational interests had been largely responsible for this situation, efforts for an agreement were quickly renewed with the result that on January 26, 1938, by resolution, the Joint Committee on Educational Legislation, a committee composed of representatives of organized school boards, teachers and civic groups from over the entire state, recommended that a State Board of Education should at least:

1. Be an appointive lay board.
2. Have the power to gather statistics and study all phases of public education in the state.
3. Be required to make annual reports and recommendations to the governor and general assembly.
4. Make its own rules and regulations.
5. Exercise some check on the formation of new districts.
6. Be authorized to recommend policies and procedures to officials of local districts.
7. Be empowered to employ such professional and clerical assistance as may be necessary in the proper discharge of its duties.
8. Have as its executive secretary the state superintendent of public instruction.

Following the passage of the Resolution, Governor Horner agreed to place the State School Board proposition in a call to a special session "if and when" he calls one. Otherwise it is certain to be an important question for consideration in the next regular session of 1939.

For my part, I very definitely believe that a State School Board is necessary if we are to make any progress at all on school affairs in this State. Only a few members of the Legislature are trained educators. They are for the most part intensely interested in good schools, but it is impossible to imagine a body of 204 members, 153 in the House of Representatives, and 51 in the Senate, elected to represent greatly divergent districts, being able to agree upon a program of benefit to the entire State. In addition they are so pressed with other problems such as taxation, relief, motor traffic, criminal and parole laws, affecting the entire state, as well as many bills affecting only the districts which they are elected to represent that there is not the time to concentrate on the school problem. It would, therefore, seem that a smaller agency definitely selected for the purpose of advising the legislature would be more successful in formulating a program, which would include in addition to the problems of consolidation of districts and finance which I have briefly touched upon in my articles, transportation of pupils; pensions and salaries for teachers, possible federal aid and standards for business administration, in fact the field of work is unlimited, if the Board is not limited in its efforts by too many restrictions written into the law when it is passed.

I urge the citizens of Illinois to give this matter serious consideration when the Legislature next convenes. Let us not permit another financial emergency to come upon us without having our house in order.

35 Years in the Cleaning Business . . .
25 Years in Joliet . . .

Celebrating our 25th Anniversary

In the Spring of 1913 --- just a quarter of a century ago --- we came to Joliet and bought what was then a small plant and a small business.

We worked hard, we lived economically, and we gave the public prompt, courteous and honest service. In return, the people of Joliet, Lemont and surrounding community have given us such liberal patronage that we have built up one of the most complete, best equipped, strictly modern cleaning plants in the whole State---not excepting Chicago.

The splendid loyal support of our thousands of friends and customers built this business for us. We thank you for your generous patronage and promise you for the future the same skilled, first class service you have always had here.

The Importance of Kernel Pattern In Hybrid Seed Corn

It is an old saying but true "It's hard to teach an old dog new tricks." We could make faster headway by teaching the dog if old that knew no tricks at all. The same that applies to the selection by kernel appearance of hybrid seed corn where those selecting have for years been grading and selecting open pollinated seed corn by kernel shapes and kernel characteristics. It is not difficult to get out of mind the old ideals and type pictures as the most desirable when we are called upon to make a selection when entirely different principles apply.

Where we are selecting open pollinated seed corn, the aim is to eliminate by kernel shape and characteristics (or kernel pattern, as we call it,) inheritances that come from undesirable types but which in the open pollinated plant will come chiefly through the male parent or pollinator that we never see. Hence we attempt to eliminate its progeny through those kernel characters that are apparent on an examination of the kernel. (Besides, of course, all the other processes of stalk and ear differentiation.)

The principles governing hybrid seed corn differ most fundamentally from open pollinated. We have in the double cross hybrid seed just the inherited characteristics of four pure line grandparents. We can say two grandmothers and two grandfathers. No other germ plasm enters into the picture. Hence, there is no thought or possibility of eliminating through seed pattern, type or selection differing inherited characteristics within a given double cross hybrid seed, assuming, of course, that our hybrid seed is made from absolutely pure line inbred foundation seed made according to correct procedure and the double cross seed made in the same manner.

Every kernel carries the same germ plasm and will grow the same kind of a plant. There are differences from the same plants in the different sizes and shapes of seed but what we are pointing out there are no differences of inheritances within the type and same double cross. There may be differences in viability, vitality, quickness of germination, disease resistance and particularly quantity of infant plant food. Let us take up these differences in the order in which they have been mentioned and we will do this under the assumption that all of the seed has been harvested, ear graded, kiln dried and stored under the same uniform condition so that differences do not arise through any relative change of these last named factors.

Viability can be determined by germination test. Where the seed shows high germination and where it was grown and matured on high phosphorous soil there are practically no differences that can be detected by kernel pattern or appearance.

Vitality. Vitality and seedling vigor are again largely dependent on the environment and conditions under which the parent plant was grown and matured and in addition the conditions under which it was harvested, kiln dried and stored. Where the parent plant had high phosphorous environment its progeny with the correct conditions of harvesting, drying and storing would be good but here we would detect the influence of high moisture at harvesting, as might be denoted by shrivelled kernel. This would be apparent on the outside of the kernel and should not be confused with kernel size and shape, although a shrivelled kernel would be easier detected on the large flat kernels than on the small dagger shaped. The latter would require closer inspection but would reveal kernel shrinkage as disclosed by the shrivelled appearance. Such kernels would grow and under good soil conditions or good growing temperature conditions would make excellent plants and within three weeks after planting it is doubtful if an expert could tell the difference. Under very poor soil and very unfavorable growing conditions the shrivelled kernel would likely be a slower grower in its seedling stage.

Within the same hybrid seed grown on a uniformly high phosphorous soil, properly dried and stored, speedy germination would be about the same on all grades except those round, plump grades which might under dry weather planting conditions be more readily contacted with soil particles so as to transmit moisture more quickly to them.

Where seed is treated there might be differences in disease resistance between the very large and the small kernel. This is due to the faster seedling rate of growth under unfavorable conditions with the large kernel. Under favorable moisture soil and temperature conditions where there was an ample supply of phosphorus within the kernel rate of growth would be about the same and hence seedling resistance to disease attack with the advantage, of course, to that kernel which carries the higher amount of infant food supply.

Seedlings have to get their moisture from the soil and just as soon as they have roots we have very ample evidence that the plant is getting moisture. The same root structure gathers the needed plant nutrition if in available form in the soil. The nitrogen supply has to be in the form of soluble nitrates and soluble nitrates in the absence of direct application of nitrates exist only as a result of bacterial activity. We call this process of making soil nitrates from various nitrogen bearing materials in the soil nitrification. A little reflection on this point may help us realize how important is the part that bacteria play in our soils and why we should also give some thought and action to their welfare and food.

ELECTRIC RATES REDUCED AGAIN

Public Service Customers Will Save
$720,000 a Year

New Rates Go Into Effect on Meter Readings
Taken On and After May 1, 1938

Residential electric rates of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois will be reduced again, beginning with meter readings taken on and after May 1. The reduction will amount to more than $720,000 annually among 95 per cent of the Company's customers.

The New Rates are as Follows:

	1 to 4 Rooms	5 Rooms	6 Rooms	7 Rooms	8 or more Rooms	Price per Kilowatt- Hour (net)
1st Block of Kilowatt-Hours used per Month	40	50	60	70	80	@ 6.2 cents
2nd Block of Kilowatt-Hours used per Month	60	50	40	30	20	@ 3.0 cents
All Over	100	100	100	100	100	@ 2.0 cents

Minimum charge—fifty cents, except in cases of unusual connected load.

The old rates (net), retained as optional for existing customers at present locations, consists of four blocks as follows:

6.8c per kilowatt-hour for first 7 kilowatt- hours used per room.	5c per kilowatt-hour for next 5 kilowatt- hours used per room.	3c per kilowatt-hour for next 5 kilowatt- hours used per room.	2c per kilowatt-hour for all electricity used in excess of 17 kilowatt-hours per room.

How Users Benefit

Householders will find that under the new rates the cost of operating electric appliances as well as lighting will be even less than before. A glance at the above new rates shows how much cheaper kilowatt-hours become with increased use of electricity. As before, such ordinary household appliances as refrigerators, lamps, radios, etc., are usually sufficient to consume the initial blocks of the rate, the balance of the service and all additional being at the 2c rate.

Further information about the new rates and new appliances can be obtained at any Public Service store.

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

Sentinels of the Republic

Within recent weeks there have been encouraging indications at Washington of a readiness to heed the needs and the purposes of the people themselves, rather than the demands of bureaucrats and theorists.

Certain members of Congress have urged a more reasonable exercise of the taxing power, to restore a lagging confidence. Others have reminded colleagues that their responsibilities to the constituents who elected them should outweigh loyalties to political office-holders.

In many ways the trend appears to be swinging from a policy of reckless and haphazard economic experiments, toward one of encouragement of production and recovery.

Americans will hope that such members of Congress continue their efforts in behalf of the nation and its citizens. For they realize that it was the American worker and producer, with his eyes on the American scene—not the theorist, with his eyes on Europe—who built our nation into greatness.

They realize that the American insistence on the right of every man to enjoy a high standard of living, to exercise full freedom of religion and of speech, and to look forward to improving his work and his condition was established, not by political and economic theorists, but by the workers and citizens themselves.

As a result of their power and their labors, America achieved a record of progress and of well-being for all its people, unique in history. Bureaucratic ideas, borrowed from overseas, have hindered rather than helped such progress.

The efforts of those representatives at Washington who are striving to restore authority to the people merit support and encouragement.

Under our American form of government, that's where authority belongs.

SWINE LOSSES
FROM ENTERITIS ARE INCREASING

One of the growing and serious farm problems in most sections of the corn belt is enteritis, or infectious bowel disease of swine.

Commonly called "necro," enteritis is most common where young pigs are raised around old, contaminated or wet hog lots. Its first havoc is often an outbreak of contagious scours or white diarrhea in suckling pigs. Unlike cholera, enteritis creeps into a herd gradually. Symptoms to watch for include: loss of weight on good rations, dry skins, a tendency to scouring, and a prominent backbone. A post-mortem examination by a veterinarian reveals the typhoid-like ulcers and decay of the bowel wall.

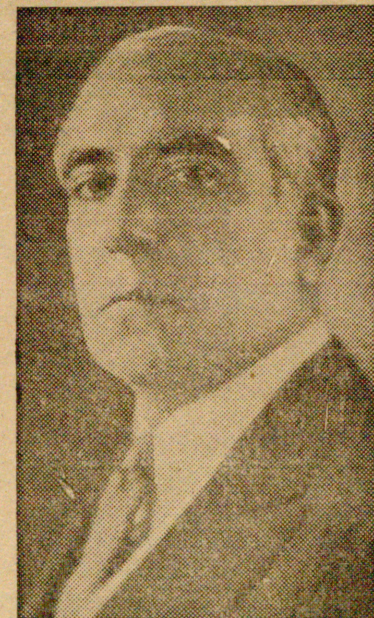

The best precautions to take consist of selecting disease-free breeding stock, raising the pigs on clean ground, and prompt diagnosis and treatment by a veterinarian when first symptoms appear. Proprietary hog remedies do little or no good in preventing or curing "necro," and are often harmful.

A typical case of enteritis—Note emaciated condition.

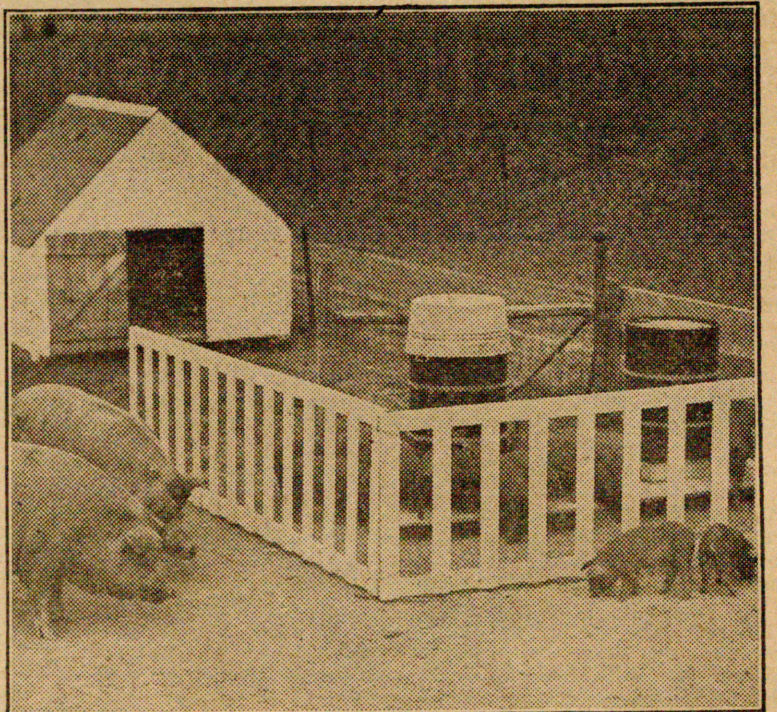

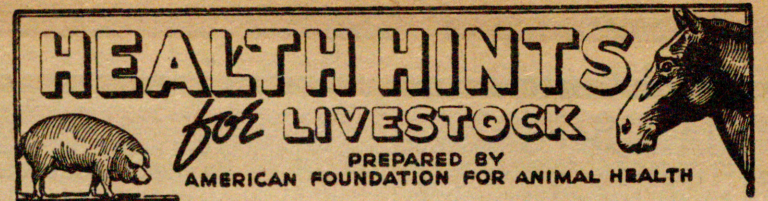

One great disadvantage of enteritis in a herd of pigs is that it may cause trouble when affected pigs are vaccinated with serum and virus against hog cholera. Such herds should never be vaccinated until proper treatment of enteritis has been followed.

C. Houston Goudiss

We announce with pride a new feature in this issue, "What You Eat and Why," by C. Houston Goudiss, noted food authority, radio speaker, author and lecturer, famous as the man who knows food "from soil to serving, from table to tissue."

One of these articles will appear each week, and we know housewives and mothers will look forward to them for the accurate, worthwhile information they contain on foods and their relation to health. This is not a recipe column. Mr. Goudiss has designed it to serve as a link between laboratory and layman in the food field, interpreting modern scientific knowledge in the language of the home maker, giving her the elemental facts regarding new discoveries and the part played by food in building and maintaining health.

Every woman wants to know what foods will benefit her family and why, and that is just the information that Mr. Goudiss will give. Watch for the articles each week, make a scrap book of them for ready reference. They contain valuable information every home maker has been wanting.

Clean ground and clean housing, the best preventives of baby pig losses.

HOW TO PREVENT LOSSES AMONG BABY PIGS

In the average litter of pigs, one-third die before they get beyond the suckling stage.

If the swine raiser would take a few simple, scientific precautions, he could reduce these losses substantially, and increase his hog profits, proportionately.

Greatest causes of baby pig losses are overlying, still-births, prematurity, starvation, scours, chilling, cannibalism, sore mouths, bull nose, navel infections, and suckling anemia. Things like starvation, weak litters, and cannibalism can be avoided by seeing that the sow gets properly-balanced rations both before and after farrowing. Scours, too, are caused by faulty diet; or there is another type of scours which is caused by a germ.

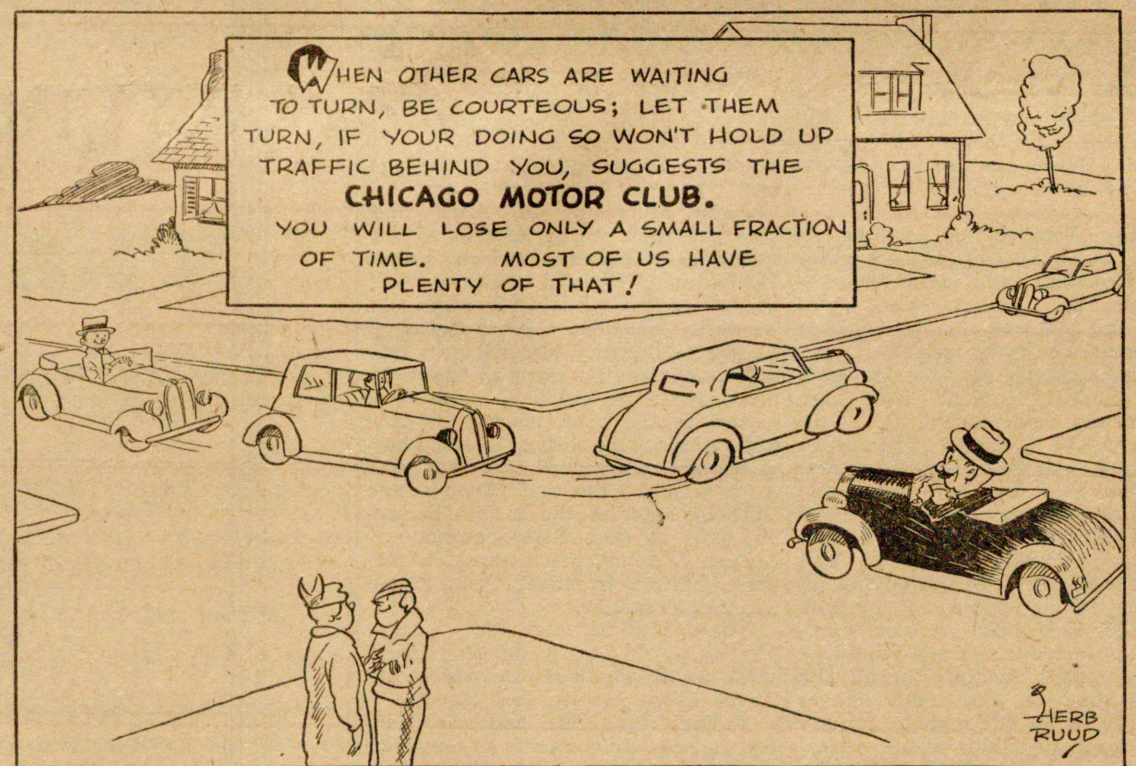

This latter type is treacherous and difficult to deal with, and should have the best possible veterinary attention.

Sore mouth and bull nose are also caused by germs, and generally show up when pigs are raised on unsanitary premises. Proper sanitation and disinfection of the hog lot and houses are the best safeguards against them.

Pneumonia or lung fever also causes many losses among baby pigs. This can best be avoided by proper housing, correct bedding, and adequate ventilation.

Around weaning time, many farmers now make it a regular practice to have their pigs vaccinated against cholera, because the pigs require less serum, and are easier to handle.

A few of the above precautions, plus timely consultation with a veterinarian in cases of doubt, will go a long way toward reducing the present high percentage of loss in the farmer's baby pig crop. After all, the marketing of one-third more hogs is a goal well worth striving for.

The Rocketship Soars—At New York World's Fair

NEW YORK — (Special) — The dream of the mechanical age and perhaps the commonplace event of the World of Tomorrow—a trip to Mars in a rocketship—will be produced in tangible form in steel and glass when a model working rocketport is placed into operation at the New York World's Fair 1939.

Now being constructed by Raymond Loewy, industrial designer, the operating planet-line will be part of a new focal exhibit in the transportation section of the Fair.

More than a thousand visitors will be able to see the show at one time. After an interesting, activated display of transportation from the day of the cave man to the present, illumination in the auditorium will be shifted to spotlight the rocketport.

Airplanes, liners, railroad trains and taxicabs of futuristic design will bring passengers and twinkling elevators will begin loading the rocket-ship's cargo. When the time comes for departure, sirens will sound, machinery will hum, a giant crane will lift the rocketship and place it in the breach of the gun and a brilliant flash and an explosion will indicate that the world-folk are off on a visit to another planet.

By means of an ingenious invention resembling the shutter of a camera, placed in the sky-ceiling, the audience will seem to see the rocketship vanish into the vast reaches of space.

Future Train, Ship for New York Fair

NEW YORK—Here is the smoothly stream-lined train of the future (on top) and the fully enclosed, storm-proof, air conditioned liner of the World of Tomorrow as Raymond Loewy, industrial designer, conceived them for a large, free focal exhibit on Transportation at the New York World's Fair 1939. The display will include every stage in civilization's transport progress as well as every vehicle used since the day of the cave man

Twin Foes
of Democracy

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

With shocked amazement America has been reading the tragic tale of what is happening under Communism and Dictatorship abroad.

Trials that are travesties, wholesale executions, widespread death by bomb and gunfire, reckless disregard of treaty rights, of national rights and of human rights—so run dispatches from Europe and Asia.

What are the purposes behind all this? What brought it about?

Essentially both Dictatorship and Communism, whatever their pretensions, are twin foes of representative democracy, as we have always known it in America.

Their aim is to subordinate the individual to the State. Their theory is that the citizen is incapable of running his own life, thinking his own thoughts, choosing his own religion, producing his own and the nation's goods under his own direction.

These things, they believe, can be better directed by the politicians in power.

The men who founded America and built it into a great nation established a different pattern. They held that government was of, by and for the people, and that the politicians were the servants of the people, not the masters.

They believed in the intelligence, the enterprise, the ability and the freedom of the individual citizen, and planned a government to encourage those virtues. The American epic proves how right they were.

But there are among us theorists and bureaucrats who disagree with the founders and builders of America. They would discourage initiative and enterprise—by vitriolic attack, by confiscatory legislation, by destructive schemes of taxation. They seek to stifle enterprise by law. They prefer to see the politician in power, the individual citizen submerged.

That isn't the American ideal of representative democracy. It approaches the way of the totalitarian states.

If Americans want to know where that path can lead, let them study the headlines from abroad, then route our own course to avoid it.

ORLAND PARK HIGH SCHOOL

Margaret Bergen and Clifford Horn received the highest marks in the biology test on unit VIII.

Literature I class will begin the study of Unit IX, entitled "The Spirit of Good Will". This unit brings before us the question of how men should feel and act toward one another. The question is reflected in stories, poems, essays and a biographical sketch.

The Music Appreciation Hour program consisted of music by modern European composers of symphonic arrangements. Selections from Finland, London and Switzerland were enjoyed.

A change has been made in the Orland Park WPA library. The former librarian who was from Midlothian has been transferred and a young lady from Oak Forest has been assigned in her place.

Model Mate

After 50 years of observation Arthur Cleveland Brent, of the Smithsonian Institution, reveals that the red-shouldered hawk is the matrimonial model of birdhood. These birds marry very young, never desert their wives, and always live in the homes they stake out, even putting up no-trespassing signs made of fresh sprigs of evergreen. Most amazing of all is the elation with which they decorate the nest with violets when there's a new addition to the family.

The following poem, entitled "The Motorist's Prayer," which appeared in the London Church Times, is an expression of the earnest desire one motorist has to guard the lives and safety of his fellowmen. If all of us who drive took this particular problem as seriously, there would be a decided decrease in the number of automobile fatalities.

THE MOTORIST'S PRAYER

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.

Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.

Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company,
From the evils of fire and all calamity.

Teach me to use my car for other's need,
Nor miss through love of speed

The beauties of thy world; and thus I may,
With joy and courtesy go my way.

Good Government
Depends on Your Committeeman

The public thinks of a committeeman only as the man who dishes out jobs. True, he does get the party patronage.

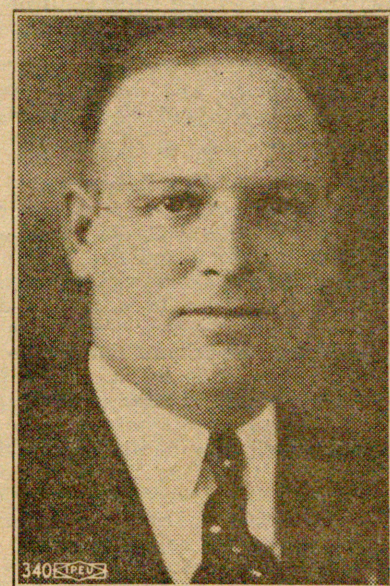

To the people who are looking for a political job that means everything and for that reason they will do their best to get your vote—often by any means—fair or unfair. But to the housewife, the homeowner, the citizen who wants good government, this has little interest.

Yet the distribution of jobs is the least important of the committeeman's functions. His is the job to help select ALL the candidates for public office—from senators, state's attorneys, judges, down to the least important offices.

To get good government one must have good candidates, but good candidates can only be selected by honest and capable committeeman.

And a committeeman who is independent—not tied up with party factions, but is respected by both, can best represent YOU.

MEETING SATURDAY EVENING AT 8 IN SAENGER HALL

AN OPEN LETTER

Fred Kohlman

Candidate and Gentleman

Mr. Kohlman:—

When you and your supporters failed to answer the open letter published in the MESSENGER of March 18th; when you and they refused to dip into the muck and fling the dirt, you disappointed your opponents. How much, you will never know, but you have given us the courage to publish to the world that altho as your opponents in this campaign we are all tarred with the same stick, we want you to know, and to let all Bremen know that there are many of us who still have some self-respect left and want to make amends for the slurs published in our name.

That foul letter, the fruit of a mind bordering on perversion, we feel was bought and paid for by Harry Clarke. He himself, cant put the words together, so his dollars found the only pen capable of such a scurrilous attack. The attack has failed in its purpose. The mud he threw, wont stick. But it has opened our eyes to the fact that we, who have backed the political fortunes of the Clarke family for many years, have earned the name of "MUDSLINGER" for our loyalty.

Fred Kohlman, you don't have to prove that you are a true DEMOCRAT. Neither Harry Clarke nor his father questioned your politics when you supported and voted for them in the past. If they are DEMOCRATS, then you are a DEMOCRAT. As for Republicans backing you in this campaign, coalition voting is a Clarke institution in Bremen township; they would not be in office today if it wasn't that they always straddled the political fence.

Fred Kohlman, don't apologize to anyone for Operating One of the cleanest, most law-abiding tavern in Bremen Township. Clarke is a pious fraud when he says he is horrified that Bremen voters want a tavern keeper to lead them. He forgets that all Bremen has heard the family boast that "a little drink buys us the votes". He depends on the taverns for his meeting places in his campaigns; the most of us would rather meet in schools and club rooms like regular people do. And listen, Fred Kohlman, we all know that you have the endorsement of the Horner Organization. That tripe which the writer of that filthy letter put out was for The BENEFIT of the newcomers into our township. Too bad we can't disclose to Mr. Connors and Mr. Sexton, his name so that history could repeat itself. As for your personal life and background, we envy your workers, who don't have to apologize FOR YOUR FAMILY LIFE.

Fred Kohlman, we have always backed the Clarkes, and all these years have lived on their promises of patronage jobs for us. Do you know where these jobs are? Let us tell you. All the Clarkes are on the payroll; no more than seven of their henchmen get appointments; the rest of the township jobs are filled by deserving Democrats from Chicago, Calumet township, and points around us. We know now that there are no jobs for Bremen township. You are right—not only was the township "sold down the river" as Clarke's writer quaintly put it, but we, his workers were played for suckers.

But we have learned our lesson. Clarke can rig up the election, can do his utmost to split the Democratic vote, but here are a bunch of votes he won't count in his favor. We are cured.

Keep up your clean fight, Fred Kohlman. Make sure that the newcomers into the township are informed of the true conditions and you'll clean up the rotten politics in this township.

Here are the answers to the five questions that Harry Clarke is begging for; we hope every new resident in Bremen reads them, we hope every blind follower of the Clarke machine will study them and learn the bunk that Clarke is passing out in hopes of re-election.

Keep your campaign clean, Fred Kohlman—the decent people of Bremen Township are for you.

C. Houston Goudiss
Describes the Precious
MINERAL SALTS

That You Must Have in Order to Build Strong Bones, Sound Teeth, Healthy Nerves, Rich Red Blood

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th Street, New York.

THE human body is often compared to a machine, but it is far more wonderful, far more complex, than the most intricate machine ever designed to run without stopping, day in and day out, for upwards of 70 years, is also a fully equipped chemical laboratory. For if a chemist should grind a man to bits and analyze the pieces, he would find at least 18 chemical elements, and possibly traces of several others.

In addition to oxygen, carbon, hydrogen and nitrogen, the body contains a wide variety of mineral materials, which are necessary to its proper functioning—and even to life itself. The list includes calcium, phosphorus, potassium, sulphur, sodium, chlorine, magnesium, iron, manganese, iodine and copper. All these substances must be furnished to the growing child—through food and drink—and generous amounts must also be supplied daily in the diet of adults, to replace the minerals that are constantly being used up.

Minerals Necessary to Life

It is vitally important that the home-maker should understand the function of these various salts and where they can be found. For if certain minerals are lacking in the body, the heart will stop beating. Without others, the bones cannot form properly. Still others are responsible for the rich red blood that makes the difference between a healthy person and a sickly one. Laboratory experiments have proved that if you leave out the smallest trace of the mineral known as manganese, you destroy the love of a mother for her child. And nutritionists—but unfortunately not mothers—are well aware that less than a thousandth of an ounce of iodine makes all the difference between a normal man and an imbecile.

Calcium—Captain of Minerals

Calcium deserves its ranking position as the captain of the minerals, because it builds the bones, or body framework. And the bony skeleton is to the human being what steel is to a building. Calcium is also the chief constituent of the teeth and upon healthy teeth rests the health of the digestive system and, in turn, the entire body. For food that is improperly masticated is imperfectly digested and fails to nourish properly.

About 99 per cent of the calcium in the body is found in the teeth and bones. If the body does not receive an adequate supply of this mineral in pre-natal life and during the growing years, the bones will be porous, distorted and easily broken, and the teeth will develop cavities and eventually may fall out.

In addition to being the principal material for making and maintaining the bones and teeth, calcium increases the strength and pulsations of the heart and helps the blood coagulate in case of injury, thus keeping you and your loved ones from bleeding to death. That is why an extra supply of calcium is fed to patients just before an operation.

Calcium Builds Will Power

There is a close relationship between calcium and sound, healthy nerves. And this precious substance likewise helps us to concentrate mentally—it strengthens our will power—and assists us in acquiring that “do or die” attitude toward life, which is essential in an age when we must all struggle or go under.

Yet despite its importance, it is estimated that out of a hundred people, only one is getting enough calcium. Professor of Nutrition at Teachers College, Columbia University, that one-half of the American people—even those with plenty of money—are literally starving for calcium, because they do not know the food sources of this vitally important mineral.

Where to Obtain Calcium

The foremost sources of calcium are milk and cheese, which is milk in concentrated form. It is chiefly to provide adequate calcium that homemakers must follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child, and a pint for each adult.

Vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, celery, asparagus, string beans, cabbage, carrots and cauliflower are also a good supplementary source of calcium. And some fruits, such as oranges, figs, strawberries and bananas likewise supply significant amounts.

Indispensable Phosphorus

Like calcium, phosphorus is required by the body in relatively large amounts, and like calcium, it is especially important in the diet of children, because it is deposited in the bones, along with calcium, as calcium phosphate.

Phosphorus is indispensable for all the active tissues in the body and plays an important part in regulating the neutrality of the blood. It can be obtained from whole grain cereals, eggs, dried beans, cheese, lean meats, and root and leafy vegetables.

Iron—King Pin of Them All

But measured in terms of food essentials, iron is king pin of them all. It is the supreme element in nutrition because it is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood. And it is the hemoglobin which carries purifying oxygen to every cell in the body. Recently, it has been discovered that copper is required for the proper utilization of iron.

“Red blooded” is a term understood by everyone to denote health and strength, and it is iron that makes us red blooded. When your children grow pale and listless, lose their pep and lack appetite, it is likely that they are starving for iron. If you become short of breath and “pant” when going up hill, or upstairs, even though there is nothing wrong with your heart or lungs, the chances are that there is insufficient red pigment in the blood—not enough to take up an adequate supply of oxygen and carry it to the millions of cells throughout the body.

There is no excuse for cheating yourself or your children of a full measure of iron, for this mineral can easily be obtained from liver, egg yolk, whole grain cereals, molasses, dried fruits, dried peas and beans, nuts, lean meats and green vegetables.

Iodine—Molder of Men

Almost everyone has heard that iodine is the mineral which helps to prevent that disfiguring enlargement of the neck, known as simple goiter. But few people realize that it is the principal constituent of thyroxin, secretion of the thyroid gland, and that the thyroid functions normally only when sufficient iodine is available.

A wide variety of physiological disorders have been laid to iodine deficiency. Obesity is frequently the result of thyroid disturbance. Specialists contend that stubborn skin diseases are associated with disorders of this gland. Many people are accused of laziness who are really suffering from thyroid deficiency. And competent authorities claim that the thyroid likewise influences mental make-up and emotional tendencies.

Iodine is found chiefly in sea-food and in fruits and vegetables grown near the sea. In inland regions, where soil and water are poor in iodine, health authorities frequently add it to the drinking

Lesson for April 3

SERVING OTHER RACES

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:24-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is no respecter of persons. Acts 10:34.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Lord of All.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Lord of All.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Showing Good Will to Other Races.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Practicing Christian Brotherhood Toward All Races.

“God is no respecter of persons” (Acts 10:34). He who by reason of His infinite knowledge might well draw lines of distinction between them is loving and gracious toward all, not willing that any should perish, extending his mercy to men of all conditions and all races. But men, whose knowledge is so limited that they cannot even rightly judge the thoughts of their own hearts, are quick to discriminate against their fellow man because he is of a different race, color, or social position.

A leader in the Southern Baptist church recently pointed out that the number of heathen in the world has increased about two and a half times as rapidly as the number of Christians, which means that at the rate of progress of missions during the last generation the world has become more heathen at the rate of six million a year, and now we are retarding the process still further. Because of financial depression we are recalling missionaries. When the world is ablaze with sin and God-denying political theories we withhold the gospel it needs. It has well been said that such strategy is like closing the hospital because an epidemic is in progress.

Jesus had gone into Syrophenicia and the region of Decapolis (look them up on the map) to rest. But the need of the Gentile people (to whom He was not at that time called to minister) impelled Him to help them also. Note how they were stimulated to believe, how their faith was tried, but triumphant.

I. Faith Encouraged.

The Greek woman and the man of Decapolis were led to believe in Christ in two different ways.

1. By hearing about Jesus. The woman “heard of him” (v. 25). Paul says, “Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God” (Rom. 10:17). Are we diligent in season and out of season, telling the story of Jesus and His love? If so, men and women of our acquaintance will hear of Him and be ready to call on Him in the day of their trouble.

2. By a personal meeting with Jesus. The man was deaf; he could not hear about Jesus, but he could see Him. To him the Lord came in person, and by the sign language, related in verse 33, He stirred his heart to believe.

II. Faith Tested.

1. By obstacles. The woman met what seemed to be a sharp rebuke (v. 27), although it was no doubt much tempered by the tender voice of Jesus, and by the fact that He did not use the word “dogs” as the Jews did in speaking of the Gentiles. He spoke kindly, and He talked of the “little dogs” which were the pets of the household. But her faith was greatly tried, just as ours often is, not that it should fail, but that its strength might be demonstrated.

2. By natural handicaps. Jesus put no impediment in the way of the man, for he was already hindered by nature. How often do we not feel that in our very personalities and bodies are those things which hinder our full apprehension of the grace of God. Shall we then give up in discouragement? No. The man believed right through the barrier of unhearing ears and a speechless tongue. We can do likewise by the grace of God.

III. Faith Rewarded.

1. By deliverance from the devil. The woman's daughter was set free because of her faith. Men and women around us need to be delivered from the devil. Perhaps you who read these lines are in need of such deliverance. “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (Acts 16:31).

2. By deliverance from personal limitations. The man's “ears were opened . . . and he spake plain” (v. 35). What is the unfortunate trait of personality, the handicap of body or mind that holds you back from accepting Christ as Saviour, or, having done so, from the full and free development of your spiritual life? Faith in Christ cuts right through the hindering inability. He said to Paul, “My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness.”

Temper

We are told, “Let not the sun go down on your wrath,” but I would add, never act or write till it has done so. This rule has saved me from many an act of folly. It is wonderful what a different view we take of the same event four-and-twenty hours after it has happened.

Forgive Your Enemies

And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

DORIS DENE'S column

Social-Minded Suitor
Should Not Marry for Romance Alone.

DEAR DORIS DENE: I am a college graduate and come from a good family. Two years ago I met a girl whom I cared for greatly. She is the only girl who has ever made me think of marriage, although I am twenty-nine and have been around a good deal. I was happy with her but gradually as I came to meet her family and to see much of them, I began to cool towards her. I find that certain members of her family are congenial to me but I cannot stand others. Frankly they are not my type and I feel sure my family would object to them. I still love my girl dearly and believe she is the right one for me. But can I hope for happiness with her when her family offends my taste? I can't get along with them and don't want to. I have asked the girl to marry me but if necessary am prepared to break the engagement off rather than have an unhappy marriage.—T. E. R.

ANSWER—For the girl's sake I should strongly advise you to break off an engagement which binds her to a mincing little snob who doesn't know the meaning of the word “love.”

If you can find it in your heart to consider wrecking your life's romance because certain members of your sweetheart's family aren't qualified to be in the Social Register—you must have ice-water in your veins and an adding-machine where your heart ought to be. For no man worth anything ever turned a girl down because he disapproved of her family's table manners.

Princes have married beggar maids, magnates have married their stenographers, aristocratic scions of fine old families have chosen their brides from the other side of the railroad tracks, and the world has learned to accept the situation calmly. For when love is truly strong it can overcome obstacles greater than those of mere social distinction.

Only the man unsure of himself and bent on social climbing could quail at the thought of what his wife's family might do to his reputation. The sensible man knows that any girl from whatever sort of family can take her place by her husband's side with ease, if she has average intelligence and quick wits. This is especially true of our American girls who are far more adaptable than those of any other race.

It doesn't take long for the gum-chewing stenog to acquaint herself with the tricks of the trade which will help her to be a social asset to her husband. Given a good brain and a ready wit she can adapt herself to her altered social position without batting an eyelash. And if the man she marries is sure of himself and of where he stands in the world he can help her to gain poise.

The weakling, the snob, the social coward cannot give his wife a helping hand. He cannot help her to get used to advantages and luxuries she's never known before. He is too busy looking nervously over his shoulder to see whether anyone is ridiculing him.

DEAR MISS DENE: My sister and I were the most devoted friends in the world. I dislike the man she married cordially and he feels the same way about me. My sister's happiness depends on me or I would never go near their house. But I must stand by her since she needs me for comfort and help. We are so much alike that we even know each other's thoughts. Would I be wise to take the hint my brother-in-law gives me and stay away from his home?—B. R.

ANSWER—Give your poor brother-in-law a chance to run his own marriage. And give your sister the opportunity to find out what sort of man she's married—and whether he hasn't perhaps just as many good points as you have.

If you stick around, you don't give the couple any time to become acquainted. Furthermore you manage to separate them effectually. For a doting sister will not forgive her new husband for being rude to little brother—and no new husband could possibly be expected to enjoy the continuous society of his brother-in-law.

Most men are as sore as a bruised finger when their brides evince a desire to be with old friends constantly. A man likes to feel that he more or less discovered the girl of his dreams—that before he came along she practically didn't exist. He doesn't want to be reminded by old pals that his little love was breaking hearts and enjoying life long before he knew about her.

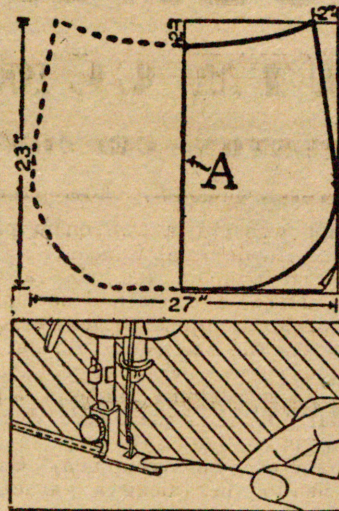

How much more angry is he then when he's confronted with his wife's brother who has been her dearest friend and severest critic all her life. How much more jealous he will be of that brother who knows his sister so well, understands her so completely. Is it any wonder the poor new husband begins to growl fiercely every time the favorite makes his appearance?

No, it isn't fair for any brother to mess up his sister's happiness. He may think that by giving her his constant companionship he is comforting her. But actually he is only making life more difficult for her.

If he really desires his sister's happiness above everything else in the world, he will have the unselfishness and the tact and the good sense to stay in the background, and to make himself scarce around the love-nest until the marriage is on a more secure foundation.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS pink and white chintz apron with pink gingham frills should inspire anyone to make long strides towards the kitchen. It is easy to cut. The material required is 1½ yards of 36-inch-wide chintz or cotton print and one yard of plain material.

For the skirt of the apron, cut a piece of paper or cloth 27 inches wide and 23 inches deep. Fold this lengthwise through the center, as at A, then measure down from the top of the fold and in from the corners the distances indicated in the diagram and mark the dots. Using the dots as a guide, mark the outline of the apron skirt as you see it in the diagram. The dimensions for shaping the bib are given in the diagram at B. The pocket is a 5-inch square with lower corners rounded as shown here at C. The apron ties are cut 6 inches wide and 36 inches long. The strip for the belt should be cut 2½ inches wide and a facing strip the same width should be cut for it. The shoulder straps are cut 4 inches wide and then creased lengthwise through the center.

The strips of the plain material for the ruffles are cut 6 inches wide. The ruffle material before it is gathered should be 2½ times the length of the space it is to fill after gathering. Use the machine hemmer foot shown here at the lower left for hemming the ruffles and the machine ruffler for gathering them.

The Slaughter Goes On

Always the same ends are accomplished though by different methods. Indians and wild animals killed the pioneers. Now 40,000 a year perish by automobiles. It is a happy land where the people can find something to celebrate every few weeks.

In the old days whole families traveled together in a covered wagon; and did not make such a to-do about it as those who now go in trailers.

Treat women like women, not pals. They like it better and it is more gentlemanly.

Mass production of popular brands of breakfast foods to meet the demand created by advertising has greatly reduced the price of many of the advertised brands. The sale of these foods adds materially to the demand and consumption of farm products in the United States.

CHAPTER I

A girl and a greyhound were running in the dark. Not running away, not going anywhere; running in a sort of rounded square, running with a desperate delight in running, in motion, in smooth and lovely speed. In the morning there would be mountains above and beyond, belittling them, but in the intimate dusk the hills had their hour, large and mild and kind, brooding the earth below them. Sometimes the girl looked up at them, but the dog kept her eyes on the dimmed, immediate foreground. There was a certain similarity between them—both young, fleet, with thin, strong legs and flat flanks and excellent wind, and both of a bronze brindle-brown. There was, likewise, a kinship of spirit, or at least of deportment, for each was shy, secret, disdainful. Presently they stopped running and stood still, breathing deeply and easily, happily tired. The greyhound pressed delicately against the girl's knees and slid a long muzzle into a slender hanging hand.

"Lightning . . ." the girl said absently. "Lightning, dear . . ." She turned toward the one open edge of the field. "Come!"

The Santa Clara valley rolled out beneath them, twinkling and trembling with lights, golden and crimson like a carnival, but just below them the windows of Danavale glowed gently. Danavale was not a town.

It had over a dozen residences generously spaced in a gracious landscape, with orchards and vineyards and gardens, stables and oak groves and tennis courts and swimming pools, which formed a sort of architectural chronology from the Great-grandmother Dana house, with its needless early-seventies skimping of porch and hall, down to that strange, modern container of Ardine La Mont Dana.

The girl and the greyhound halted before the pioneer house. It was narrow-chested, narrow-hipped, out-moded as a calico wrapper or a boot-jack, behind its low picket fence and its cinnamon pinks and china asters and candytuft.

She opened the gate and went up the dim path and rang the strident bell, and waited.

The great-grandmother opened the door herself. "Sairy Lynn! Come in!"

"I can't stay, Great-granny. I'm late for dinner now."

"My stars, I should say you are! after seven. Where you been, child?" She peered up at her out of eyes like embers.

"Walking."

"Didn't you know your beau's back?"

"I knew."

The old woman laughed a shrill, impish cackle. "And a dinner party and a new dress spread out on the bed—and here you be, traipsin' over the hills in the dark! You better march yourself home, quick's ever you can step on it! There'll be the devil to pay."

The great-grandparents had crossed the plains in a covered wagon and Great-grandmother Sarah Ann Kittredge Dana was, to all intents and purposes, still in it, well up in her nineties, content to potter about her house and dooryard and wait for the dutiful droppings-in of her daughters and granddaughters and great-granddaughters.

"I know," Sarah Lynn said somberly. "I can't help it."

A voice came down the narrow sudden stairs. "Hi! Sarah Lynn!"

"Hello, Uncle Lynn! I'll come up for a moment. I can't stay." She ran up the precipitate steps.

Lynn Dana lived with the ancestress on the upper floor of the old house. He had been sitting in a chair for more than half his life—approximately since the day he had made the winning touchdown for Stanford and failed to scramble up with his yelling teammates.

"I can't stay," Sarah Lynn said again halting on the threshold of his door.

"I should think not!" he looked at the clock. "You can't even be here! My eyes deceive me. At this very instant, in the habiliments of high festivity you sit at the festive board." He regarded her linen shorts, her pull-over, her brown, bare knees. "Duncan arrived?"

"I suppose so. Lightning and I have been up in the hills."

He laughed. "Well, you're due down in the valley now, young woman, and you'd best be on your way."

"Rather stay with you and Great-granny," she said sullenly.

"And we'd rather have you! But it isn't on the cards this evening. Hop it, my dear!"

Sarah Lynn leaned in the doorway for a long moment. "All right; I'll go. But I won't do it! Nothing can make me—not even Mother." She departed swiftly, without farewells.

A small figure was waiting in the shadows of the big house of her father.

"Hello, Penny!" Sarah Lynn said. Miss Ethelinda Pennington had been her governess in the old days and was still a component part of the Edwin Dana household. Sarah Lynn Dana was the lode star of her existence and she had not said ten words of praise to her in the 17 years she had been with her. She spoke now in shocked rebuke.

"Sarah Lynn! Dinner's waiting! Mr. Duncan's been here since six! Your mother is greatly disturbed. Wherever have you been?" She was hustling her along a garden path toward a side door.

"Running."

"Running away! Really, Sarah Lynn, at your age! I wonder at you!"

"Not running away; running round and round in circles, the way I always do, Penny," her charge said bitterly. "Never getting anywhere."

They went into the house and instantly there was a soft rustle and a muted exclamation and her mother was upon her, big and beautiful, sunnily sweet.

"You're one a' the dark ones."

"Darling!" she cried. "I know you couldn't have realized how late it is! Are you quite all right? Then it doesn't matter! You'll be down just as soon as you possibly can—in your sweet new dress!" She kissed her. "Hurry, darling. Oh, Duncan! This naughty child walked farther than she realized and she hadn't a watch, but she'll be ready in two minutes!"

A pallid youth who looked as if he might have been born in a dinner coat had come into the hall. "Sarah Lynn!" he said gladly.

She gave him a limp hand. "Hello, Duncan! I'll hurry, Mother." She ran upstairs.

Duncan followed Sarah Lynn onto the wide veranda, down the steps, onto the lawn. The greyhound came toward them in lovely leaps but stopped in chill reserve at sight of Duncan, her ears flattening.

"I've always liked dogs," he said a trifle defensively, "but I can't see this pooch very far. I've got a good Boston bull at home; regular dog." He came closer. "No; I'm not crazy about your hound but I am crazy about you, Sarah Lynn."

"Duncan, please! Let's not begin that all over again."

"I'm going to begin it again and finish it, this time! Listen, Sarah Lynn; I've never wanted anything in all my life that I didn't get."

"It's only because you can't have me. Ever since you were born they've handed you everything you cried for—rattles and kiddie-cars and skates and sleds and a pony and a car and a yacht. Now you think they're going to hand you—me. My mother, your mother. But they won't; they can't."

He laughed contentedly. "They don't have to! You'll do it yourself."

Oh, I'm not going to rush you! I can play a waiting game. But just get it through your head that you belong to me."

Sarah Lynn thought he was rather pathetic with his fragility and his pallor and his elegance, casting himself for the character of the conquering male.

She detached herself, not ungraciously, walked away, stood looking up at the stars. Suddenly a single planet separated itself from its fellow and moved smoothly across the sky. Shooting star? Flying star? Plane. Sometime, she told herself, sometime she would fly away in the night.

Home-coming Danas always paid prompt respect to the matriarch. Sally Ann Dana, constant traveler and occasional author, would not even stop for her casual unpacking before she made her devoirs to the ancient head of her tribe.

"Mercy! Not ninety-six! Not really? I have the feeling that I must dash over there—that she may be gone any minute!"

"No! no! She is quite marvelously well, our precious little pioneer," Aunt Helena said. "But she has longed to see you."

Sally Ann Dana came near to her great-grandmother's place and stood still to appreciate it, but the narrow front door opened suddenly and the old woman popped out.

"Sally Ann! And here you be, after traipsing the wide world over!" she chirped. "Come in! Sally Ann! My land! My third daughter Molly's boy Wallie's girl! And I know more'n that!" She peered up at her sharply. "You're one a' the dark ones. Like me."

The traveler followed her into the tiny prim parlor with its marble-topped center table and the hair-flowers framed on the wall. "Yes, I dare say I am, Great-granny, and proud of it."

"Course you are. Every last one of us is, always. We have what folks call get-up-and-get. Just naturally up'n put out from wherever we're at, north, south, east, west, land or sea. Made that way, somehow." She gave an elfin chuckle. "Queer! There'll be pinky-white, blue-eyed babies, tow-headed, till you can't rest—litters of 'em, and then all of a sudden, like a fly in a pan a' milk, comes a dark one. Set and rest you, Sally Ann! Me, now, I headed west."

"I know you did—and aren't we glad and grateful?"

"Wild to pioneer, I was; sick a'

Sunday school and sewing samplers, but my folks wouldn't stir. So I just up'n went! Tied up a few things and my Bible in my old plaid shawl and sneaked out after the folks was fast asleep, and walked the seven mile and crawled into one a' the covered wagons and played possum till we was well under way. There was a preacher among 'em, and the day I was fifteen he married me to Hank Dana."

"But—Great-granny—wasn't that why you ran away? Why you went? Weren't you in love with Great-grandfather?"

The ancestress stared and shook her head. "Never laid eyes on him till we was a week or more on the way."

Sally Ann laughed. "And all these years I've been nourished on that tender romance!"

"Guess some a' the grand-girls from the East made that up," the old woman said shrewdly.

"Really? Great-granny, I wonder if you'd give me a cup of tea?"

"Lynn, he's got a lunch waiting for you upstairs, and I guess likely he's wondering where you are."

She stepped quickly to the foot of the narrow, precipitous flight and called up: "Oh, Lynn? Comp'n' coming!"

"Fine!" came an answering masculine hail. "Yo ho, Sally Ann! Send her up—fast!"

The returned traveler laughed aloud, gladly. "I'll see you again, Great-granny, darling. It's been so nice to—"

"Yes. I want to tell you about Sairy Lynn, young Ed's girl. He married a smart woman from Detroit; toney and determined. Well, she's a thin, dark, close-mouthed young-one, odder'n Adam's off ox. Minute I clapped eyes on her in the cradle, I knew. 'Well, Adelaide, you got one a' the queer ones,' I says, and it made her madder'n a wet hen. But it's true; you'll see. Say, maybe you'll take her off with you when you go? She'd admire to put out somewhere, Sairy Lynn would."

Sally Ann shook her head. "Mercy, no, Great-granny! I'm the last person—I know nothing about children, and, besides, I'm alone and love it! I'm a lone wolf."

The ancestress regarded her gravely out of her bright, sunken eyes. "We're all lone wolves, us dark ones. Looks like we ought to run together. That young-one ought to get away, Sally Ann!"

Sally Ann laughed. "She will, if she's any good. Didn't I?"

For Years Figure of Christ, Drawn by Prisoner, Has Been Illuminated in Jail

When the master switch is pulled each night in the Central District holdover cell block at police headquarters, and the prisoners settle down in darkness to what rest they can get on the steel "boards," one light remains burning in a vacant cell, relates a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The cell has been empty and the light has burned for five years, illuminating a figure of Christ on the cross which an unknown prisoner, arrested on some charge since forgotten, penciled on the buff steel wall before being released. The sentiment which led Chief of Police Joseph Gerke, since retired, to order the cell kept vacant from that time on also led prison guards to dub it "The Holy Cell."

The drawing is no amateurish effort. It is complete except for the right arm. Someone, either a policeman or a visitor—no one remembers which—once tried to finish the drawing but his poor effort was erased.

The drawing was discovered shortly after a prison guard, passing a row of cells, noticed a prisoner kneeling apparently in prayer, with his face toward the wall. When the prisoner was removed later, the turnkey entered, turned on the light and saw the drawing.

The prisoner who had last occupied the cell said he was not the artist. In an effort to learn which of many prisoners was responsible, prison guards studied notations of dates, names and even code messages on the cell walls.

One of the legends that has grown up about "The Holy Cell" is that a former prisoner once sent a postcard identifying himself as the artist. Another is that the search was narrowed down to three prisoners but met a blank wall there.

Visitors are allowed to study the picture at close range. Above the drawing is an inscription with the letters I. N. R. I., which stands for Iesus Nazarenus Rex Iudaeorum, or Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews.

The eight bunks, the steel walls and the porcelain wash stand are kept spotless.

Some prisoners are kept at the holdover for federal authorities and others to await state trials. The artist might have had several weeks or even months to complete his work.

Very Smart New Fashions

A HOUSE dress with long slender lines, a dress and apron for little girls, and a popular bolero frock for slim young figures! You will certainly want one of these, and more likely will want all three. With each pattern, you receive a complete and detailed sew chart specially planned to help beginners, so that the making will be easy, and save you money besides.

Popular Bolero Frock.

Make it up of silk crepe or a pretty print, and see how expensive, how flattering, it looks! The short bolero and wide shoulders make the slim lines of the frock even more graceful. Notice how cleverly the dress is shirred into the front panel at the waistline. This is one of the prettiest afternoon dresses you could choose for this spring.

Dress and Apron for Tots.

Your little girl will be so proud of having this heart-shaped apron to put on over her best dress when she plays house! And the puffed-sleeved, square-necked dress is adorable. You can make the two of them in no time. For the dress, choose dimity or organdy for dress-up; gingham or percale for every day. Dimity or lawn for the apron.

House Dress for Large Figures.

This is such a becoming, comfortable, good-looking dress to work in, round the house. The lines are so straight and unhampered, and pleats in the short sleeves give plenty of room for stretching and reaching. It takes inches off the figure, too. Make it up in seersucker, gingham, linen or percale printed in small designs.

The Patterns.

1478 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 6½ yards of 39-inch material.

1468 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 years. Size 4 requires 1½ yards of 35-inch material for the dress, with 6 yards of narrow ribbon to trim and 1 yard wider ribbon for the belt. Size 4 requires ¾ yard of 35-inch material for the apron, and 2½ yards of ruffling.

1476 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5 yards of 35-inch material without nap.

TINLEY PARK

About thirty relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fahrenholz in Blue Island last Saturday evening to help them celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in playing cards and bunco. A nephew, Robert Nemeth, played selections on his accordion. A buffet supper was served and a good time was enjoyed by those present.

May 4th is the date set for the card and bunco party to be sponsored by the Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church.

The Hirsch Brothers Funeral Home is being repaired. A new asbestos shingle siding has been put on this week.

The Ladies Aid of the English M. E. church of Tinley Park will hold their April meeting in the home of Mrs. B. Anfield, Wednesday, April 6th at 2:00 p. m.

In order to prevent auto drivers from colliding with the fire plug in front of the Dini tavern, four iron posts have been placed around the plug. Both hydrant and posts have been painted red and crushed stone has also been placed around them.

The Ladies Aid of the Tinley German M. E. church invites the congregation and friends to an evening of worship and song with them, Sunday, April 3rd at 7:30 p. m. At that time the dime collection plates which were distributed to members and friends about a year ago, will be gathered in. An interesting program has been arranged for.

Due to the illness of her mother, Mrs. George Wannamacher of Mokena, Miss Frieda Wannamacher has been off duty at the J. C. Funk store this week.

Mr. Lanham who has been residing in the Dini place, has moved in the Otto Lehman place.

Representatives of the various local organizations met with the local American Legion carnival committee Tuesday night in the village hall to arrange for the carnival sponsored by the Tinley Park Legion Post this summer. More details of the carnival will be printed later.

Shirley Anderson of Tinley Park has charge of the costumes for the senior play "Spring Prom" to be held in the school auditorium of the Thornton Township High School on Friday, April 22nd and Saturday, April 23rd. The play is a comedy of college life. The cast is under the direction of Miss Lillian Conley.

Thornton's senior class this year plans to donate $100 from the proceeds of the play for a new stage curtain as their annual gift to the school. All other plays will contribute 10 per cent of their net proceeds to the curtain fund. The new curtain it is expected will be hung during the spring vacation.

George Schreiber entertained a group of Chicago relatives Sunday. The village board will hold their semi-monthly meeting next Monday night. The local sewer question will most likely come up for discussion.
